Reading: Students will identify elements of poetry (structure, pattern, rhythm, language). They will think about an author’s purpose and why authors choose specific writer’s craft. They will also think and talk about what they know and connect it to what they are reading to deepen their understanding.

Writing: Students will understand the purpose for their writing. They will state and give reasons for their opinion. They will use transition words and phrases to link their opinion and reasons.

Skills: Students will review the triple consonants of "plh," and "plh." They will correctly use the quantifier "txhua, txhia" (all, every, some). They will make lists of the English chunks for “oo” and “ear” words.

Math: Students will practice estimation skills with money amounts; collect, display, and interpret using frequency tables and bar graphs; and determine the median, mean, and mode of data sets.

Looking Ahead

Homework:
Remember to read daily for at least 20 minutes!

Judge Vuelo Visitation (2/28/20): Third-fifth grade students are going to see and listen to Judge Sophia Vuelo (the first Hmong American judge in Minnesota) share her story with students on how she became who she is today.
