Choosing staff with the necessary skills and mindsets

Providing your staff with information, rationale, and opportunities to practice

Ongoing assistance in the classroom to support teachers’ implementation

Measuring the degree to which a practice is implemented as intended

Identifying barriers outside of your control and bringing them to the attention of the leaders who can intervene

Creating an environment within your school which supports implementation

Addressing problems that have a defined cause and a clear, though not necessarily easy, solution

Addressing problems that involve competing perspectives – different views of the problem and of potential solutions

Ongoing collection and analysis of both student outcome data and data on teacher practice (fidelity)
